Friends and supporters of The New York Stem Cell Foundation gathered at the home of Jodie and John Eastman in East Hampton on July 25 to learn more about the latest remarkable breakthroughs in stem cell research. Susan L. Solomon, NYSCF co-founder and CEO, Dr. Zach Hall, NYSCF board member and former president of the California State Stem Cell Initiative, and Dr. Daylon James, a NYSCF research fellow, spoke about the Foundation's role in accelerating this cutting-edge research as scientists work to discover cures for diseases ranging from diabetes to ALS and cancer.

Founded in 2005, The New York Stem Cell Foundation is a privately funded foundation dedicated to furthering human stem cell research to advance the search for cures of the major diseases of our time. The foundation opened the first privately funded human embryonic stem cell laboratory in New York City in March 2006 to serve as a "safe haven" where scientists can conduct advanced human embryonic stem cell research free of federal restrictions. The organization supports scientists engaged in stem cell research through grants, fellowships and symposia; runs collaborative, state-of-the-art research facilities supported entirely with private funds and directly focused on curing disease; and educates the public about the importance and potential benefits of stem cell research.
